CALL ISSUED FOR WOMEN ARMY CORPS MEDICAL TECHNICIANS

The U. S. Army has issued a call for 22,000 recruits for the Women's Army Corps to serve as medical technicians in Army hospitals.

Already, thousands of Wacs are working with medical officers and Army nurses in Army hospitals throughout the country. They are helping soldiers regain their spirits after the long, tedious months of healing. They are helping wounded men recover full use of their limbs. They are working as medical, surgical, dental, and laboratory technicians.

WAC medical technicians give biological tests, type blood for transfusions, make blood counts and prepare vaccines, working in the wards of the big Army hospitals. WAC surgical technicians assist medical officers and Army nurses in wards and operating rooms.

Emphasizing the need for more Wacs in the Medical Department, Major Gen. Norman T. Kirk, the Surgeon General, U. S. Army, said:

"As the campaign for the liberation of nations under the Axis yoke intensifies, the need for more Army hospital personnel grows by leaps and bounds. The Army Medical Department urgently requires the services of patriotic young women for direct assignment or professional training as hospital technicians." Wacs are also needed for other types of Army assignments in the Army Air Forces, Army Ground and Army Service Forces. Thousands of them are proving their worth as soldiers at Army installations in this country and overseas.

Women between 20 and 50 years of age can secure full details about joining the Women's Army Corps by writing to The Adjutant General, U. S. Army, Washington 25, D. C. or by visiting any U. S. Army Recruiting Office.

PROTECTION AGAINST COAL SHORTAGE IS URGED

Protection against coal shortage by obtaining the highest possible efficiency in the use of Illinois-mined coal was urged today by Geo. B. McKibben, coal administrator for Illinois. Illinois coal will produce highly satisfactory results if proper technique is followed, he said. Many who have been using the Illinois fuel fail to handle their furnaces in the manner that best utilizes the heat producing qualities of the high volatile Illinois coal.

The engineering experiment station at the University of Illinois has available for free distribution a firing chart to be followed when hand firing high volatile bituminous coal. The charts are also available from coal merchants.

The good he did will last through time and eternity, and so our nation will most rightly and fittingly observe his birthday next Thursday, February 22nd. This legal holiday should inspire us to emulate this illustrious son of the Republic to a purer, nobler, holier manhood.

Rep. Lott O'Neill Expects School Fund Increase

The Editor is in receipt of the following interesting and informative letter from Rep. Lott O'Neill of the 41st Senatorial District regarding school legislation and other vital matters. Rep. O'Neill is serving on the following important committees: Election, Appropriation, Executive, Revenue, Waterways and Public Health.

Some of the school people in your area might be interested to know that I am to be chairman of the Committee on Education of the legislature. This committee handles all bills of interest to public education in Illinois. In reply to those who have written me concerning an increase in the School Distributive Fund I would like to say that I believe we may expect a fairly substantial increase in this state aid at this session. If you are interested I might be able to send you from time to time some comments on legislation during the session. Knowing the difficulties under which newspaper people are operating at this time I hesitate to send anything without knowing if they have time and space for such comments.

I should like to have some reaction on the matter of Reapportionment, which the Governor and Mayor of Chicago have evidently come to an agreement on. I am only concerned about the wishes of this district. Also the matter of a Constitutional Convention, on which these two men have agreed. Does this district want me to vote for it. It is difficult to get the reaction of all the people and when I do not hear from the people at home I of course use my own judgement and hope it is right.

ALPINE RESIDENT ATTENDS MOODY FOUNDERS WEEK CONFERENCE

Mrs. Meta White of Alpine attended the Founder's Week Conference of Moody's Bible Institute last Saturday in Chicago.

Miss Ibaith from the Hawaiian Islands was the speaker. She and her family of four including 2 children, born there, worked among the people until Jap airplanes circled the homes and dropped pamphlets saying "Surrender, you are surrounded." They were very frightened but knew God would protect them and Gen. MacArthur promised to take them to Australia and safety. They packed and left with motor boats and machine guns on either side of them.

Their first attempt to leave was cancelled but they started again the next morning at 3 o'clock and paddled in canoes to a waiting U. S. Submarine. They heard motors so close that they could have been their own, but they were Jap Submarines nearby.

They finally reached their destination in safety and knew God had helped pilot them to safety.

BABY DEVELOPMENT CLINIC TO BE GIVEN BY REGISTERED NURSE

The Baby Development Clinic is a program given by a registered nurse on the staff of the Chicago organization bearing the same name. The program consists of a full color motion picture known as "Babies Can Be Fun." This silent 16 millimeter film shows the care of the Baby from the time it is brought from the hospital to its first day at nursery school.

In the film, the young mother is taught to give the bath, to dress and diaper the baby, how to sterilize bottles and make formula if baby is bottle fed, how to begin its toilet habits and many other matters of health training upon which the well being of the child is founded.

Miss Fuchs augments the film with a running discussion and amplifies it with the use of a demonstration doll and other equipment which she carries with her. Questions of general nature will be taken up for discussion and answered insofar as practical. No medical advice is given.

A gift booklet is given to each person who attends the clinic. This book is known as Babies Own Story and is published by the Baby Development Clinic.

The time of the program is Monday, 2:00 and 7:00. Tuesday thru Friday 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Saturday 10:00 a.m. only, all in the Hub Store in Chicago.

U. S. ARMY MEDICAL DEPT. CALLING FOR HELP

The U. S. Army Medical Department is calling for help—the help of women—to supplement the services of Army hospital staffs whose numbers are too few to cope with the increasing flow of sick and wounded soldiers from overseas. These thousands of casualties are placing a heavy burden on the Army hospitals and it is imperative that the overworked doctors and nurses receive help—at once. The kind of help that they need is the kind of help that any intelligent, healthy, and earnest woman can give. It is skilled help but does not require professional training. It consists in the performance of general hospital duties of a nonprofessional nature which by saving the time of nurses and doctors will enable them to give their professional care to a greater number of patients.

WAC hospital units are now forming in each of the forty-eight states and the District of Columbia. These units will bear the names of their respective states, local communities, or other titles that may be designated by the governors. Groups of women of the same state or local community may enlist together for initial service at a particular Army hospital. Thus, as members of WAC hospital units, they may be with their friends and preserve their local interests while working together in the common effort of healing our fighting men.

For full information about the new offers to women as members of the Women's Army Corp—write to the U. S. Procurement office, City Hall, Joliet, Ill. or Phone Collect Joliet 22312.

Country Cured

© W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy and his wife, when first married, settled on a farm in Missouri, where Homer was born. Sunday meant church, company for dinner, and steer weighing. The Croys attended the Omaha Exposition where Homer saw his first horseless carriage, motion pictures, and "hula" dancer. Renzo purchased a farm nearby and became a welcome addition to the community. Homer was the first Croy to attend high school and college. Answering a wire he arrived home after his mother passed away. Finishing college he worked for Post-Dispatch, then left for New York to continue his writing work. He had had some success free lancing.

CHAPTER XVIII

It was nice to get back to the straight roads, roads which run mile after mile with never a jerk or a bog. Except at the section lines where they're corrected to fit in with the narrowing for the North Pole. First on one side, then on the other, like squares on a checkerboard, were the white houses and red barns. They looked nice. It was certainly a thousand times better than the hodgepodge, helter-skelter way they had things in New York State.

Even in so short a time, the countryside seemed to be changing. At least, I could see things more clearly. Farmers had once been paid to have advertisements painted on their barns; the rate was pitiful, sometimes as low as five dollars; and there for years would be the hideous sign. Sometimes, due to changes, the farmer would put a new door in his barn, or cut a window, and there'd be a gap in the letters, like a missing tooth.

These signs on barns were disappearing; some were reappearing on billboards. But the effect was not so horrific as I had known in my youth. Some are still there, not so bold or blatant as they were but lingering like December flies.

And there, when we got to the farm, was Phebe standing in the door, beaming through her gold-rimmed glasses.

The first thing was for Pa and me to "walk across the farm."

We came to a sunken place.

"That's Dave," said Pa. We stood in silence for a few moments. Then Pa said, "I always liked Dave."

I realized I always had, too.

As we walked along, he gave little clearing signs in his throat, as he always did when he was getting ready to say something important.

"Well, Homer, I've got a piece of news you'll be interested in. Phebe and I are planning on getting married!" There was a moment of anxious silence. "I thought maybe you'd approve of it. She's always been a second mother to you."

Of course I approved of it and I told him so. "I'm glad to hear you speak that way," he said.

When we got back to the house, Phebe was in the kitchen. "I guess your father told you?" she said anxiously.

"Yes, and I'm pleased."

"I hoped you would be," she said, as she went on with her work.

The people, I found, were more prosperous. Our hack was replaced by a surrey with a fringe around its canopy top. People who had once ridden in two-wheeled carts (like the one mother and I had been in when Dave had not kept to the straight and narrow) were now dashing around in buggies. In no time at all, buggies had rubber tires. If a boy with plain iron tires on his buggy asked a girl to "go" with him, his goose was cooked. The day when my father had courted my mother with a lead pencil and a roll of cinnamon bark was gone. And the day when I had walked over to a girl's house and we had popped corn together was gone, too. A boy now had to have a spanking team of horses and a buggy top that would fold back, or he couldn't get to first base. Boys no longer visited with girls in the backs of grocery stores. They had to take the girls into drug-stores which had ice cream fountains. The expense was staggering.

I was more of a visitor than I had ever been before. I helped a little, but it was more a gesture than real work. Pa still clung to the idea that maybe I would come back where I belonged. How much was I making? (It was $20 a week.) Well, didn't I think there was a good opportunity on a farm? He never quite said "the." Then he told about a neighbor boy who had gone to Sedalia to study telegraphy and had got to gambling and running around with a fast set. Finally his father had to go down and get him.

Pa asked about New York and when I told him about the great crowds and the high buildings, he shook his head, puzzled. Why did I want to subject myself to them? "Did you visit the stockyards, Homer?" When I told him they didn't have stockyards, as we knew them in St. Joseph and Kansas City and Omaha, he was flabbergasted. How did they get their livestock dressed? I told him vaguely it was "shipped in," but his mind about New York was already made up.

He asked exactly what I did and when I told him that, for the most part, I sat around and read pieces that other people had written, he thought it was a pretty hazardous way to earn a living. The old gentleman was right.

The farms were steadily growing larger; the small man was being squeezed out. More and more machinery; a tedder was no longer a curiosity. Newt Kennedy had long ago quit corresponding for the county weekly; nearly everybody took a paper; many of them took a daily paper—not a newspaper but a stockyard daily. The other news could wait till the end of the week. The neighbor women, who had once come to our horse pond in their Mother Hubbards, were now buying bathing suits and going to the 102, or to Big Foot Lake. Even the conversation had changed. Instead of talking about setting hens, people talked about "brooders" and about the news they'd heard on the party line. It was getting harder and harder to have a secret.

There'd been half a dozen hands since Renzo Davis. About all they thought of was getting to town and spending their money, Pa said. Every hand, who pretended to be anybody, had a buggy. Automobiles had about stopped scaring the daylight out of horses. Sometimes Pa could pass a man driving a car without saying the man ought to be jailed.

Several summers went by, and each time I hurried home, and each time I saw changes. Changes I probably would not have noticed if I had been on the farm all the time. For one thing, Pa was getting old; and Phebe, too. Phebe who believed in me almost as much as my mother did. Phebe with her little turned-up nose and small square face and her slender Indian-straight figure. That is, it had always been straight, but now was beginning to stoop. When she sat down she let her hands rest quietly in her lap, instead of keeping them busy. When she saw a team coming, she couldn't tell whose it was.

It was not long until I was off the Delineator and the Butterick publications, and a free lance again with all the hazards of a non-salary job. But it was the way my people had always lived; it came natural to me. It seemed logical to Pa, too. Better work for yourself than hire out.

My success as a writer was small, but some way or other I kept going. And this allowed me time on the farm and among the people I knew so well. Finally I wrote a novel, "Boone Stop," which was laid on the old home farm and among our neighbors. It got what I was learning to call a good "press." William Dean Howells wrote that it "struck a new note in American literature." It certainly didn't strike a new note in royalties. It hardly struck a note at all. Just a faint ping. I sent a copy to Pa and in due time got a letter. "Your book received and will read it at my earliest leisure." He never mentioned it again. But Phebe said that when company came he worked it into the conversation.

In fact, so far as I know, he never read a book in his life except the Agricultural Year Book. But he was plenty smart. And I've written so many. Sometimes I think he had it on me.

The old poverty days were gone. Pa was rich in comparison to his early days on the farm. No penny-pinching now; no cracks that had to have tallow poured in them. He kept adding to the farm until he had 350 acres.

He built a new house, closer to the road, and left the old house standing in the back yard, the house where I was born; the one I mentioned where the very room had been turned into a henhouse. But the hens are out now. If anyone tore that house down it would certainly break my heart. I like to sit in it, alone, and look at the old things, so far away yet so strangely close. I even know the nailheads. The old clock shelf is still on the wall; the clock shelf under which hung our Hostetter's almanac on its blue string.

Profound changes are hard to see at the time, and so it was now. Profound changes, indeed, had happened to the first wave of pioneers; some, when our section had become settled, had swept on west to new land. New land. Virgin soil. New opportunities. They had gone to western Kansas and western Nebraska and to Wyoming and Montana, responding to the very westward-moving urge that had propelled them into this section. Those who had remained and prospered were moving to "the city." Their sons and daughters were shouldering the farms. The old settlers were retiring, but it was not put so crudely as that. They were moving to the city to allow their children to see what they could do with the farm.

Disease and breakdown was among them, as it always is among the old. You could see them on blustery days, bundled up and sitting in the back seats of the spring-wagons, these men who had sunk the first plows into the buffalo grass, little beads of rheum clinging to their noses. It stirred me and touched me, as it always has, this matter of the old moving into the back seat. Some day I'll be moving there, too. Maybe I can get used to it by that time. Maybe I'll even welcome it. For who knows how he will act, or respond, to anything till the time is upon him?

Age had its heavy hand on my father. He walked more slowly, the hired man had to oil the windmill. But Pa got up just as early of a morning, long before daylight, poked up the base-burner, and started the kitchen stove going. Pretty soon Phebe would be hopping around in the kitchen and the hired man would be pulling on his boots. The party line would ring and Phebe would move to it, straightening out her apron almost as if she expected company. After a while she would put the receiver back. "The Knabbs are butchering and they're calling the Frank Halls to see if they can bring a scalding barrel."

"You better call them and tell 'em they can have ours. We've got a good tight barrel." Pa always had tight barrels; he was a good farmer.

Phebe would call two shorts and a long and there would be a busy clicking in the receiver. "They say they'll call later if they need it."

I would be the last one down, the city having just about ruined me. "Good morning," we would say to each other. The hand would come in with the lantern, and pretty soon Phebe would come to the sitting room door. "I've got the things on." Then we would go to the table and Pa would bend forward his whitening head.

It would be light, soon after breakfast, then Pa and the hand would start out to do the rest of the chores. At first I offered to help, but by this time Pa knew the worst. The city had got me; it'd been years since I'd had a callus.

Pa began to talk about moving to the city where he would "take it easy"—my father who had never taken it easy. Yep, he was going to town and get on the jury! For that was what the other retired farmers were doing. We could see them sitting on the benches in the courthouse yard, with nothing to do, watching the teams go by, hoping to see someone from their neighborhood. At noon they would disappear—go in' home to dinner—then after a time they would come back and again plant themselves on the wooden benches.

And then he did, as most farmers chose to do, bought a house so he could sit on the porch and watch the old neighbors pass. It was south of the water tower—the water tower I had seen so many times as Dave and I had rumbled in to school. There the tower stood, like a sentinel, the first thing I could see as I approached town; and, going home, when I turned and looked back, there it was watching me.

Now came the problem of getting someone to run the farm. No one was good enough. One was a good hog farmer, but weak on cattle; another was a good small grain farmer, but weak on sheep. Another was a hard worker, but drove his team down hill in a gallop. Another didn't have any boys in the family.

At last, he found a man. Appeared promising.

"Homer, some day you'll have to look after this yourself. It's a good farm. Don't ever let loose of it."

He delayed moving. The stable wasn't any good. Had to repair it. Cellar needed fixin'. Roof must have attention.

Pa left the farm—Pa who had never been farther than Omaha since he had arrived by ox team—and he and Phebe started city life. But the habits of half a century could not be changed. They got up before daylight. Pa dozed in his chair until Phebe announced breakfast. Then under the newfangled electric light (which hurt people's eyes) they ate breakfast. He had brought in one horse and now fed him and worked with him, doing in a small way what he had done so long on the farm. He had brought in the buggy, too; the very one he had courted in. But now it was a bit old and rattled a good deal on bridges. He put on new washers, but it still clucked.

TREASURES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:44-46; 14:13-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1:17.

Hidden treasure!—there is something about it that catches our imaginations and stirs our expectancy of discovering great riches. Men are constantly going on expeditions to seek out lost treasure. Others are engaged in study and research to bring out new treasures in nature or in the realm of learning or art.

Why not stir up a little excitement about the unbelievably rich treasures which are hid in Christ and in the life of faith in Him? It is not hidden, except to the eye of unbelief, but it is greatly neglected and all but forgotten by many.

The Scripture portions assigned for our lesson are not as well adapted to it as one could wish, but we may make good use of them. We learn here:

I. The Cost of Redemption (13:44-46).

Undoubtedly the lesson committee had in mind the usual interpretation of these parables, which presents the sinner as the one seeking the treasure and giving up all that he may have Christ.

While it is true that our redemption is worth more than anything else in all the world and that the Christian would gladly set aside (or would he?) everything for Christ's sake, yet that does not fulfill the thought of this parable. After all, what has a sinner (whose own righteousness is described in Scripture as "filthy rags") to sell in order to obtain redemption? And is it for sale? (See Eph. 2:8).

Obviously, we here have the Saviour with His all-seeing eye and loving heart noting in fallen humanity the pearl of great price, His own Church. He then gives up all the glory He had with the Father, comes to the earth, and even becomes sin for us that He may bring us to God.

Salvation in Christ is no little thing, not something which was purchased with gold or silver, but with the precious blood of Christ. We ought to value it highly, and because we are bought with such a price we ought always to glorify God (I Cor. 6:28).

II. The Heart of Compassion (14:13-16).

The One who was willing to die that men might have eternal life was not unmindful of their need of His mercy and grace for their daily problems. Jesus not only died that we might have redemption from sin, but He lived (yes, and lives now!) with tender-hearted compassion toward those in need.

He who is the living Bread was not willing that men should hunger for their daily bread. The disciples saw only one solution—to send them away, but Jesus said, "They need not depart."

One is fearful that the church has been all too quick about sending the needy away to some social agency or community charity, when it should have won their confidence by its compassion, and then brought them to Christ.

Little is much when God is in it, and by the divine touch of Jesus the multitude was fed. Could we not do far more for Christ if we would only use the little we have, with His blessing, for the help of our fellow men?

III. The Miracle of Provision (14:17-21).

We pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," and it is only as God provides it that we have it. He gives life to the seed, and multiplies it in rich harvest, and we eat, we trust, with thankful hearts.

That is a miracle—so oft repeated that we have lost a bit of the wonder and glory of it. Here in the story of the feeding of the five thousand and more (v. 21) with five loaves and two fishes, we have such a miracle of provision taking the little and making it enough for the multitude.

The Lord may not work in exactly the same way today, but do not God's servants see Him multiply their meager store as they give it out in His name? That is true whether the gift be of material or spiritual things. God can and does bless those who trust Him. Letting what we have pass through the hands of Christ results in transformation and multiplication. Try it!

Men and women are value-conscious in our day. While money is plentiful, goods of real quality are scarce, and one must look for that which has durability and worth. The treasures which Christ offers are enduring. He says, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal" (Matt. 6:20).

By contrast, "the things Satan offers are temporary. In a few years most earthly honors and wealth must be laid aside. But the treasures of the kingdom are treasures which God intends that we should possess forever.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any drugstore, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

FEAR OF COAL STRIKE

Biggest problem on the labor horizon is the definitely looming possibility of a national coal strike on April 1. Industry fears it, the government fears it, but even more, perhaps, other labor leaders fear it. They fear that bull-headed John L. Lewis, head of the miners, will precipitate a strike which will blacken the eye of the entire labor movement, further undermining public confidence in labor. "Bull Jack" Lewis, as they call him, belongs neither to the AFL nor the CIO, and the executives of both are worried over the effect which a strike called by the miners would have on their organizations. For, they point out, the public does not discriminate between different labor unions in time of crisis.

Negotiations for a new coal contract are scheduled to begin March 1 between John L. Lewis and the coal operators. This gives 30 days in which to reach an agreement. Last year, however, the negotiations started earlier, and, even so, didn't conclude by March 31.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes, in order to head off a mine shutdown, has sent a letter both to the coal operators and John L. Lewis proposing that they continue the present wage agreement for another year. The coal operators are understood to be ready to agree to this proposal.

John L. Lewis's office, however, sent a delaying reply. His secretary wrote Ickes that Lewis was "absent from the city." This probably means that Lewis is conferring with his mine lieutenants before he sends Ickes a final decision.

WHY RUSSIANS WAITED

U. S. military strategists now disclose two reasons why the great Russian winter offensive was delayed.

The first problem was one of supplies. Although the red army had the bulk of the equipment it needed, deliveries of several relatively small but highly important items were delayed.

One of the items they waited for was several million tons of canned beef which midwestern packing firms have been producing since Russia entered the war.

Red army front-line troops live almost entirely on this canned beef during offensives. The packers knew they had a deadline to make on their order, but couldn't get enough manpower to do the job. As the days rolled by, even office workers were drafted to the production line. However, the shipment wasn't ready until weeks after the date set by the Russians. The same was true of several other important products. In the end, the British dipped into their own stockpiles in England, and shipped the necessary material to fully equip the Red army.

Finally, when the great offensive was about to start in Mid-December, an unseasonable thaw set in on the eastern front, bogging down the Red army equipment. The Russians had massed tremendous new Stalin tanks, larger than anything either the Germans or the other Allies have seen. These could not be moved except over frozen terrain. When the front froze solid again, Stalin gave the word and the long-delayed winter offensive began.

BRITISH PROPOSE KEEPING HIROHITO

Very little appeared in the papers about it, but highly important policies regarding future relations with Japan were discussed at the recent institute of Pacific relations at Hot Springs, Va. Most important of all was a proposal by the British to retain Emperor Hirohito and the Japanese ruling class in the post-war setup of Japan.

Sir Paul Butler, leading adviser to the British foreign office, led the appeal for Hirohito.

Behind closed doors at the swank Homestead hotel, Butler made this blunt pronouncement: "No alternative to a monarchical system, under the present emperor or some other member of his family, is likely to provide the focus of stability which will be essential if the state is not to dissolve into chaos in the impending crisis."

Other United Nations delegates also were vigorously opposed to the British policy of appeasing the emperor. Most significant of all was the position of the British dominions—Canada, Australia and New Zealand—which split with the delegation from the British Isles itself.

CAPITAL CHAFF

New York's ex-lieutenant-governor, Charles Poletti, has been doing an A-1 job in Italy. But at first he got many a cold shoulder from Italians before somebody tipped him off to change the form of the proclamations he issued as military commissioner in Rome. Poletti began his proclamations with "Io, Carlo Poletti. . . ." For a score of years Italians were fed up reading proclamations which began "Io, Benito Mussolini. . . ."

Concrete for Poultry House Proves Ideal

Can Be Built to Suit
Flock of Any Size

THE ideal poultry house will provide plenty of ventilation, without drafts, direct sunlight, and be free from excess moisture and extreme temperatures.

The ideal house will also allow for expansion, unless small units are desirable. A 20 x 20 foot house will prove sufficient for from 100 to 150 hens.

The features of an ideal house can be secured from a poultry house made from concrete blocks, which also has other advantages, being rat-proof and long-lasting.

Regardless of the shape of the roof, a trow loft will add year-around comfort to poultry in the house.

The laying house should include proper roosts built over concrete or matched dropping boards; nests protected against the light, easy to clean; covered dry-mash hoppers, easy to fill and clean; curtains for open fronts, or movable windows; running water, with sanitary drinking fountains.

In most localities, a poultry house, unless also used as a brooder house, may have one-fourth of its area in front, open, but protected by curtain rolls.

A south or southeastern slope provides the best location for a poultry house. In building a long house, solid partitions should be erected every 20 to 30 feet, to prevent drafts.

New Potato Facts.

A scab and blight resistant potato, early producing, good cooking quality and meeting market requirements—is the promise of new varieties being developed for the 32 potato breeding states.

A starch is now being produced from domestic potatoes, equal in quality to the Holland and Germany imported starch.

Plastics are being manufactured from potato pulp, by-product of starch manufacturing.

German chemists have produced a rice-like food, mainly made of potatoes and whey.

Larger potatoes, of higher vitamin content, can be produced by seed potatoes being treated in gas-tight chambers.

Potatoes are being used to manufacture paper and alcohol in addition to furnishing feed.

Swine Pox Shows Rapid Increase

A substantial increase in swine pox has been reported. Swine raisers should recognize the fact that there are two types of pox virus, says a report of the American Veterinary Medical association.

One type, swine pox virus, does not cause many death losses but does undermine the hog's health. The other type, cow pox virus, causes a severe disturbance and a number of deaths.

The important step in all cases is to eliminate lice from the animals and the premises, because lice are the actual carriers of this disease. Where there are no lice, there is no swine pox. If lice is present the hogs should be treated with an oil and sulphur solution and quarters thoroughly cleaned and disinfected regularly.

Measure of a Good Kitchen

Planning is important in kitchens. So are storage space, disposal facilities and a score of other factors. Yet none is more vital than the range. For upon the range depends the success of the meal. Round Oak, builder of fine cooking and heating equipment for 74 years, will help equip America's post-war homes with the range best suited to their needs whether gas, electric or solid fuel. After the war as before, the measure of a good kitchen will be the name on the range.

War Prisoners Aid

While the Y.M.C.A.'s Centennial Year was being observed throughout the world in 1944, its one to five years of service in the various prison camps were also being celebrated by prisoners everywhere. As one representative of War Prisoners Aid of the Y.M.C.A., a participating service of the National War Fund, wrote from Europe:

"A secretary generally finds in these days, in all war prison camps that he visits, a real 'Y.M.C.A. fever'—sporting events, celebrations and other commemorative gatherings."

Visiting Stalag 1 A, Germany, this representative found an excellent article on the "Y's" Centennial in the magazine published by the Belgian prisoners. But perhaps the most touching tribute was that tendered by the Polish section of the same camp. Of his visit there, the secretary writes:

"Among the Poles I found the usual well-ordered cleanliness and good organization. They had prepared a surprise for me. On the stage of the theatre hut was a table on which stood a splendid picture in oils, while lower down towards the orchestra was a row of smaller excellent oil paintings. They wanted me to take all these. They said they could never be grateful enough for all the help that War Prisoners Aid of the Y.M.C.A. is giving them."

War Prisoners Aid

Camp Zonderwater, South Africa, said to be one of the world's largest prison camps, presented a special problem to War Prisoners Aid of the Y.M.C.A., a participating service of the National War Fund. For of the thousands of Italian prisoners held there, only a few knew any English—and books in Italian were almost impossible to obtain. So the ambitious Y.M.C.A. representative offered to teach the camp English, interest in which had greatly increased because of war changes in Europe.

Men with a slight knowledge of the language were centered in Block One. There they were trained for eight weeks, then given an examination. The better students were now sent to the other blocks as teachers. Meanwhile, the necessary textbooks had actually been produced. A Y.M.C.A. Secretary writes:

"The Y.M.C.A. undertook to compile an English Grammar; this was done on a rosette machine in its office, and three editions have been issued. The next need was an English dictionary, and our Secretary and an Italian typist spent many weeks writing, correcting and re-writing this. The Welfare Officer acted as reviser and had hundreds of copies printed. The next step now is to produce a small reader."

War Prisoners Aid secretaries will attempt—and accomplish—almost anything!

CONGRESSIONAL VIEWS

by Congressman Chauncey W. Reed, 11th District, Illinois

A Vote of "No Confidence:" The Senate last week, by a vote of 74 to 12 passed and sent to the House a measure that will strip the next Secretary of Commerce of most of his powers. It took this action before passing on the nomination by President Roosevelt of Henry Wallace for this position. It is anticipated that the House may further strip the office of other powers before acquiescing thereto. Surely this action can be construed in no other vein except that the Congress has "no confidence" in Henry. That the proffer of the Secretaryship to him was purely for payment for political services was quite apparent from the President's letter to Secretary Jones. Some Congressmen have called attention to the President's letter to the Democratic Convention last summer and the consequent ditching of Wallace for Truman. They are now so unkind as to suggest that the President's letter to Secretary Jones was intended as a "kiss of death" and was intended to cause the rejection of Mr. Wallace's name and the consequent removal from the Presidential field four years hence of the "fair haired boy" of the left wingers. Is the President really a candidate for a fifth term?

TIRE QUOTAS AGAIN REDUCED

Passenger car tire quotas for the month of February have been cut by the Office of Price Administration to 1,600,000 the lowest since last October, and are 200,000 fewer than last month and 400,000 tires below December. Quotas of tires for tractor-implement use, on the other hand, remain unchanged at 50,000. The February reduction, states Brig. Gen. Royal Lord, Deputy Chief of Staff to Gen. Eisenhower, "can be summed up in two words—Military Necessity." He pointed out that tires on war equipment wear out at an "enormous rate" and that the military "simply doesn't have enough tires." And in the words of Max McCullough, Deputy OPA Administrator for rationing, "the reduced passenger car tire quotas again point up the vital importance of prompt recapping and tire repairs."

Mokena Oilers trimmed the V-Eighters two games and tied the Robins for fifth place. Fred Rauch and Herman Lorenz were the main factor in the V-Eighters defeat.

Watch those Mokena Paperhangers go. They trimmed the Robins for three and are tied for third place. They have climbed from last place ten games out of first to third place for five games out of the lead in nine weeks. Looks like the team to beat. At this fast pace they will finish in first place unless they hit a slump like the other teams have encountered during the season.

Dear Ladies:

I received the lovely Birthday card with both Christmas and Birthday present enclosed. I want to thank all of you ladies for your kindness and for remembering me. The gift was very useful. I assure you, and it was very nice for Mrs. Macmillan to write a few lines about me.

I should have written sooner, but at present we are working nights as well as days, and most of our evenings are taken up in giving training to the men. What little time we have left is gone by the time we write our lady friends and families.

Your card traveled to my old camp in Mississippi, and followed me to Texas here. My whole outfit moved here the 1st week in January and we are still doing the same work namely training troops in the Infantry.

I have been to Austin once since I've been here, that city is about 36 miles from this camp. It is a very nice city, and the people are very kind. This is the second time I am in Texas and I find the "True Southern Hospitality" is really here. I visited Texas University there and also the Governor's Mansion. I went thru the Capitol and was shown around, in and through both Houses by a kind old lady there.

I again want to thank you for the gift and here's hoping every thing is well and are getting along alright.

Sincerely,
St. Robert S. Nemeth

Dear Mrs. Clark:

I wish to thank you and the members of the Mokena Women's Service Club for the two packages that helped to brighten the Xmas season for me.

The fudge arrived one day and the Xmas package the day following. The fudge was enjoyed thoroughly by myself and friends. Fudge as tasty as it was should be shared. Seldom have I tasted as good.

The Xmas package was indeed a treat. It was an ideal gift for one in the service. I'm certain that all who received a similar package was as pleased as I was.

I have been meaning to write to you for some time, but never seemed to get around to it. I want to thank you very much for those Xmas packages. They were swell. The fudge was really good, and the other box contained everything a fellow can use. The boys here sure wish they were from a friendly town like Mokena. Well, I'm doing the same old job as I have been on for sometime. So I really have nothing new to tell.

I know this is a short letter, but I believe a short one can express my thanks as well as a longer one. So thank again and a Happy New Year.

Sincerely,

Italy, Jan. 18, 1945

Dear Friends:

After having tasted some of that delicious fudge that I received today, I can't help but send my thanks to you right away. I must admit that it is some of the best fudge that I have tasted. It arrived in very good condition with not a broken piece in the box. To make sure that it lasts for a while I will probably have to move or else ration it out to the officers in my tent. Somehow or other they like it too. Damn it. Again may I say "Thank You."

The weather has not been good for flying so I haven't completed many missions lately. I have a total of twelve targets to my credit. Hope to increase that rapidly in the near future. My pilot just came back this evening from a trip to the 5th Army front. I haven't heard everything yet but he seems to have had an interesting experience. So far I haven't received the News Bulletin since I have been in Italy but expect it soon. Have heard that Artie Hurley is in this area but I do not know his address.

Sincerely,
Edward Laurier

A MOKENA LADY SPIT UP ACID LIQUIDS FOR HOURS AFTER EATING

For hours after every meal, a Mokena lady used to spit up a strong acidulous liquid mixed with pieces of half digested food. She says it was awful. At times she would nearly strangle. She had stomach bloating, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Today, this lady eats her meals and enjoys them. And she says the change is due to taking EBB-HELP. Her food agrees with her. No gas bloating or spitting up after eating. She is also free of headaches now and bowels are regular, thanks to this Remarkable New Compound.

EBB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get EBB-HELP. Hensel Drug Store, Mokena.

Your Christmas box arrived here yesterday and was surely a pleasant surprise. The articles which it contained are very fine, already some of the fellows have been reading the booklet, "It's All Your's Veteran" and we find it highly interesting and informative.

The people here in Luxembourg are very friendly and good to us. On Thanksgiving Day many of us were invited into their homes for dinner and supper. The invitations are still being extended and we certainly enjoy them.

Thank you for your Christmas remembrance and may you all have a happy Holiday season.

Dear Folks:

Received your letter but sorry to say, no package. You know how the mail is during Christmas. I'll take this time to thank you for it because I'm pretty slow when it comes to writing letters. I could probably say I don't have time and a lot of other excuses but I'll admit I'm just too lazy to write. A guy loves to get letters but sure hates to write them. I'm still in India and Burma flying as usual. Not many of our original bunch left but I'm still holding out. I've been promoted again to 1st Lt. Hope they don't discover the mistake. You folks at home are sure OK wish I could be there with you for Christmas. Thanks a lot for the Tinley Times and by the way please forward my new address to the Times office. Until we meet again, Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Dear Sirs:

Quite sometime ago I received a very pleasant surprise in the way of a Christmas package from you but I'm afraid it taken me a very long time to express my gratitude. May I do so now? It was very good of you to remember. Its things like that which fellows in my position do not expect which make a person realize that we have God to thank for the fact that the people on our side of the world are still trying to think of the other person rather than themselves, a fact which cannot be commended too highly.

No doubt your mailing list is a long one so there must be a lot of people in the same position as myself who were made happy by an act of kindness by someone they possibly never knew. Over here prayers mean a lot to us and you can rest assured that you'll all be remembered in my prayers on Christmas day. I know that this greeting is late but I'd like very much to wish all of you a very Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Thanks again for your thoughtful-ness. I remain,

Gratefully yours,

MENTHOLATUM

YOU may recall the time when Jim Braddock, supposed to be all washed up, removed the heavy-weight championship crown from Max Baer's carefree dome. After that party we suggested that the "primrose trail" rarely led to any pugilistic heights, or any other athletic heights. There are certain physical freaks—I won't mention their names—in boxing, baseball and golf, who trained largely on gin, scotch and bourbon and still made the headlines. For a while.

But for each one of these exceptions I can name you ten who trained correctly and reached the top of the hill—Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Benny Leonard, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden, Byron Nelson, Sammy Snead, Jug McSpaden, Gene Sarazen, Don Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Bill Johnston, all of our track stars and 98 per cent of our great football and baseball players such as Mel Ott, Carl Hubbell, Blozis, Nagurski, Bill Dickey—but why go on? Most of these are the ones who count.

This question was raised by the recent meeting at Madison Square Garden between two primrose trailers from the past—Lee Oma and Baksi. Both started out along the soft and easy road. Both were physically qualified to do a much better job than they displayed in their efforts. But neither was willing to pay the price of condition—the price that Tunney, Dempsey and Joe Louis paid to be ready with the best they had to give. And I'm giving you three of the tops along this rugged road.

As a general rule the so-called "primrose trail" has a sudden, abrupt and dismal finish. At the start of their careers Oma and Baksi were galloping merrily along this trail—and getting nowhere in a hurry. Now both are supposed to have changed their earlier habits—in the understanding that both are about the two best heavyweights left, outside of war service. Both wasted valuable time in improving themselves. It took a world war to plant them up near the front. Oma seems to be going up faster than Baksi. He beat the tough ex-miner decisively in 10 rounds, weighing only 185½ pounds to Baksi's 211.

Keeping in Condition

This isn't any sermon or lecture on the matter of keeping in shape, or the value of hard training. But there is a general writing and talking tendency to overplay some of the playboys who traveled a long way up in spite of their odd ways of training.

Harry Greb was one. So was Mickey Walker. Walter Hagen was another, later on in his career. And there was Rube Waddell, Bugs Raymond, Shufflin' Phil Douglas—great pitchers. Even the overpowering Babe Ruth had his lapses. So did Jim Thorpe. So did Grover Cleveland Alexander.

But what about the great majority of stars who made a point of being in shape—who trained for the job?

The best conditioned fighters I've known in the last 20 years were Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis. And they were not so bad.

Most of the star ballplayers belong to this list—I should say about 92 per cent of them. I mean such big leaguers as Ty Cobb, Christy Mathewson, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins, George Sisler, Lou Gehrig, Carl Hubbell, Mel Ott, Hans Wagner, Lefty Grove, Joe Gordon, Bill Dickey—I could keep on for two columns.

I'd say about 99 per cent of the college and pro football players—the top ones—keep in shape and refrain at least from the gentle art of getting cockeyed.

It makes a better story to write or tell about the fellow who was plastered the day or the night before—and yet came along to win. But I could also tell you about many more who might have won—many more—who flopped for the same reason.

There are, of course, certain exceptions. But there are not so many exceptions when you rank them against the vast majority who took the other road. Those who lack the courage—or perhaps the fortitude—who hope to be athletes without proper training and conditioning—are in for a heavy price and a heavier jolt. They at least are bucking tremendous odds.

Football Weaknesses

Football officials have been given too heavy a burden. They can make or break any close game. It is for this reason that we suggest two changes that will not only help out the officials, but will also help football. The first would permit forward passing any place back of the line. The second is that after a forward pass is thrown, it would be made a free ball for both receivers and defenders. It wouldn't matter who went after it.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first use of motor trucks—and that means rubber tires—by the U. S. Army in active campaigns occurred during the Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916. About 800 motor vehicles were in use on the Mexican border.

B. F. Goodrich's latest analysis of the rubber situation shows that after the war annual potential rubber production of the world should be 2,800,000 long tons. This is more than twice the amount of rubber used by the entire world in 1941, the record year, when consumption totaled 1,300,000 long tons.

Curtain Tricks for Problem Windows

THE smart plaid curtains shown herewith match the window seat and several slip covers, and the wooden curtain pole, rings and draw cord match the dominant color in the plaid repeating the color of small cushions and lamp base. The window lets in the maximum of light and you would never guess that originally it looked like a postage stamp in the middle of a blank wall. At first it seemed impossible to curtain it because fixtures could not be screwed to metal casements or the plaster.

The built-in book shelves helped that. A space a foot wide was allowed at each side of the window so that the curtains could hang over the wall, and the painted wooden pole was then screwed to the sides of the shelves. The diagram shows this and how the draw cord was knotted so that the curtains could be pulled back and forth.

NOTE: These curtains are from the 32-page booklet "Make Your Own Curtains" which Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. To get a copy send 15 cents with name and address direct to:

WHO USE YOUR BATTERIES!

The Navy and Merchant Marine send rapid ship-to-ship messages by battery-powered flasher signal lights when radio communication might give a ship's position to the enemy.

It's difficult to locate men drifting in the sea! Water-tight battery lights on buoyant lifesaver suits have meant the difference between life and death for many Merchant seamen.

For emergency communication by voice, the Merchant Marine uses a portable megaphone to broadcast orders and instructions. Dry batteries give necessary power to the megaphone.

Two men and a bazooka make a winning team! But it takes large quantities of ammunition and dry battery power to keep these portable, hard-hitting weapons firing at the enemy.

Deadly flamethrowers are blazing the road to Victory! Dry batteries help to create the spark that sends these efficient weapons into instant, flaming action against the enemy.

The Signal Corps man with a Walkie-Talkie has freedom of speech as long as he has plenty of dry batteries! Handie-Talkies also use thousands of war batteries to power vital communications.

When they come Home—Burgess Batteries will be back again, too... powering flashlights, radios, telephones, instruments and controls for millions of homes, farms and industries throughout America.

In Fifth Column

The most subtle of all demonstrations of derision staged by the people of Paris during the Nazi occupation was the frequent publication of a photograph of Pierre Laval on the front page of a certain newspaper--at the head of the fifth column.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work--do not act as Nature intended--fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!
